

Learning with confidence

Educational therapy for

- ▶ Dyscalculia
- ▶ Dyslexia
- ▶ Dyslexia in English as a foreign language

Resolving learning problems

Frustrated pupils and desperate parents – if learning becomes a problem, educational therapy can help. Dyscalculia or dyslexia is not a question of lacking eagerness to learn. Often, important prerequisites for learning are missing. The Duden Institute für Lerntherapie help pupils with severe learning difficulties.

Successful learning is possible

The concept of integrative educational therapy is scientifically founded and has already proven its effectiveness in the field with many thousands of children and young people. Our team, which is composed of experienced specialist teachers, insightful psychologists and specially trained educators, develops individual therapy plans for all pupils. We thus lay the foundations for learning ability, promote individual learning strategies and work through learning deficits.

The world of Duden

You probably already know 'Duden' as the German language dictionary. The Duden Institute für Lerntherapie are also part of the world of Duden. We help children and young people to succeed in reading, writing and arithmetic as well as rebuilding their self-confidence.

Language in therapy sessions

Your child's educational therapy will be provided in German and not all of our employees speak English. Of course you can still come and see us if you only speak a little German or even none at all. In this case it is best to ask for a consultant who speaks English in advance. We are happy to take our time to assist you and will answer all of your questions so that your child receives the right help.

Our locations

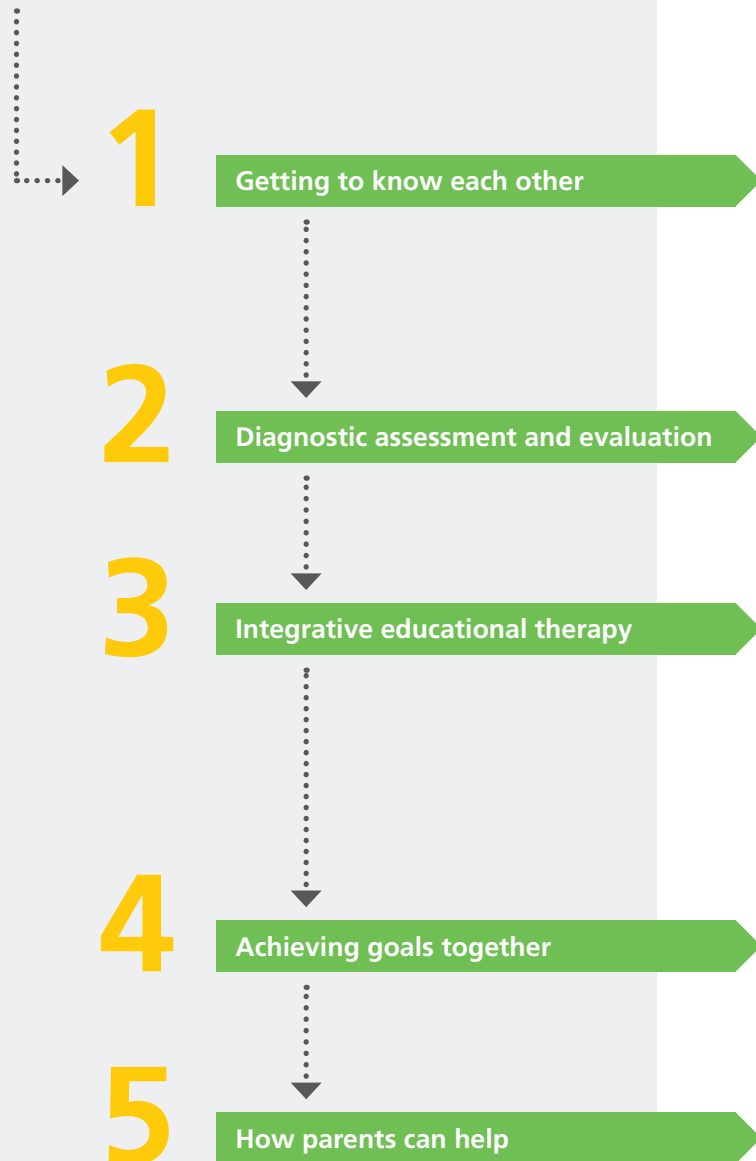

You can find us in more than 90 locations in Germany and Austria. If there is no location nearby, we can also provide online therapy for you. We also have a specialised institute called "International-Online", offering educational therapy for children who go to school abroad.

Steps to success at school

Our approach to learning

Efficient learning is a skill that can be learned. That's why we use a wide variety of measures to help your child as part of integrative educational therapy.

In an initial free consultation, we like to get to know your child and the problems it faces. We discuss the problems he or she is facing to find out if your child may have dyslexia/dyscalculia. We look into possible causes for the learning difficulties and present solutions to elaborate if an educational therapy could be the right help for your child.

As part of a comprehensive diagnosis process, we will analyse the individual problems faced by your child. Reports, exercise books and information provided by you will help us to set up the right therapy plan for your child.

While working with your child, we will combine pedagogical, psychotherapeutic and specialist teaching methodology to create a successful overall concept. Depending on your requirements, educational therapy can be provided in one-to-one sessions or can be combined with small group sessions. In this way we can provide individual help for your child. By the end, your child will have learned how to learn, and school will be an enjoyable and successful experience again.

Regular contact with parents is important to us. That's why you will be intensively involved in our therapeutic work and be given regular updates about your child's progress. If you wish, we will also be happy to speak with teachers, the school psychologist or your pediatrician.

Parental support is important for the success of the therapy. We are happy to help you with handling your child's learning problems and give you tips on how to complement the therapy at home in a meaningful way, using tried-and-tested practice materials.

Our approach to integrative educational therapy combines the didactics in mathematics or literacy education with methods from other forms of therapy such as speech therapy, occupational therapy, and family therapy.

The fundamental elements of the therapy are:

- ▶ free consultation for parents
- ▶ in-depth diagnosis
- ▶ personalised therapy plan
- ▶ individual therapy and small group sessions
- ▶ support from specially-trained therapists
- ▶ regular communication with parents and class teachers

Since 1992, the Duden Institute für Lerntherapie have been successfully providing educational therapy to children and young people with severe learning difficulties.

Your child can become a successful learner too.
